WIVES OF SOLDIERS TESTIFY FOR FORD Governor - General Gladly

Some Women Admit Relief Was Delayed, and One Says She Lied.

Judge Tucker to Rule Soon on Admitting Evidence on Preparedness.

Special Despatch to THE BUN. MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., June 3 .-When the trial of Henry Ford's suit against the Chicago Tribune for an alleged libelous editorial was resumed to-day, Lieut James Connors, a recruiting officer in June, 1916, was called to the witness chair. Weymouth Kirkland,

Lieut. Connors told of calling upon Frank L. Klingensmith, who at that time was a director and secretary of the Ford company, and being informed by him that the company would take care of the dependants of men who went to the Mexican border and that their jobs would await their return.

Lieut. Connors testified that he did not consider the information of sufficient importance to give it to the dozen or more newspaper men or others of the sixteen recruiting officers as an incentive towards encouraging men to enlist.

Upon being questioned as to whether other manufacturing concerns and automobile factories were asked in regard to their policy toward the soldiers, Con-nors said he made no other inquiries be-cause he was not interested. The afternoon session was mostly taken up by the examination of soldiers' wives. Testimony was given that it was about five weeks after the men had gone to the border before the Ford company really assisted the dependant families, and in several cases these dependants were in actual want. Two children of an employee were sent to a charitable institution before assistance was ren-dered by the Ford officials.

A bit of interest to-day was aroused y a reprimand administered to Alfred ucking of plaintiff's counsel, by Judge James G. Tucker for persistently objecting to the manner of cross-examina-tion followed by Mr. Kirkland.

It is likely that at least two more days will be required by the plaintiff's attorneys to get their evidence before the jury. Then the Tribune's counsel will an opportunity to offer testimony regarding the Mexican situation in 1916, and the lack of preparedness which the Tribune in 1916 said existed, if Judge Tucker decides in favor of admitting it.

Warning that the bill introduced in Harrison said the Japanese question did the House of Representatives to repeat not loom as large in the islands as in the luxury tax section of the revenue the House of Representatives to repeal law has been laid aside was issued by Lew Hahn, secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, yesterday. Mr. Hain has sent telegrams to merchants throughout the country warn-ing them that the movement in opposition to the luxury taxes must take on new vigor if the stores hope to have the sec-

In pointing out the meriousness of the situation so far as the merchants are concerned, Mr. Hahn said that it appeared that Congress is waiting to see what the mentiment of the country is in respect to the repeal.
